A Shark's Mistake.

"Don't you do no foolin' with a shark," said a Barnegat fisherman as he crowded tobacco into his pipe for another smoke. "Sharks is an animal as knows more'n you think for. A couple of years ago I took a party out under weak fish in the yacht Mary. She belongs to Capt. Small, or did afore he died. We were anchored up in Bay No. 3, and the fish were biting like smoke, when all at once the school left us. I knowed that meant a shark, and I looked around for him. Purty soon he came alongside, and I up with a pole and gave him an awful jab in the back. You can't hurt a shark's body very well, but his feelings are as tender as a child's. This fellow ran off a bit and then cocked his eye at me and took a good long squirt. Then he ran around under the stern to read the yacht's name, and when he went off he gave his tail a flirt which meant that he would call around and make it pleasant for me some other time.

"Well, in the course of three or four days Capt. Small got home and went out in the Mary for sheephead. He went up to No. 3 and cast anchor, and then set down in his usual position—his right leg hanging over the port quarter and his foot just touching the water. He hadn't been there two minutes before along came a shark and cut that leg off below the knee as slick as a chopper could have done it. The captain had scarcely realized his loss afore the fish came back with the leg, give himself a bit and a twist, and the bloody meat was flung back into the boat. For why? Because the shark had discovered that he had bit the wrong man. He was after me, and he had got Small. He had nothin' agin Small, and he cheerfully brought back the leg when he discovered his mistake. The captain he died of the bite, but not before I had explained things and the last thing he said was that he forgave the shark."—Detroit Free Press.

Burdette.

A Newark girl who eloped with a wild Indian. This remorseless, pitiless hatred with which the eastern people pursue the poor Indian is something incomprehensible to the people of the west. Out there they may, and occasionally do, shoot an Indian, but they don't believe in torturing him.

NO JOB FOR A SNAKE.

A big copperhead snake went wriggling into a house in Waynesburg, Pa., chased the woman and her five daughters, and then into the street, and held the fort till the man came home. There is nothing remarkable about that. We have known a little mouse not three inches long to chase a whole sewing society out into a snowdrift.

A LAWLESS LIFE.

Sometimes when I think what a lawless life mine has been I wonder that the respectable outlaws with whom I am most intimately associated in social, religious and political circles have not elected a negative one. I insert here as a saving clause. I have never overstated the value of my property to the assessor.—R. J. Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

A Prosaic Joke.

Laura—Oh, Tom, how you made me jump! Don't blow on my neck—it tickles me so. Have you finished your sketch already.—The Judge.

A Plea for the Enemy.

To succeed in the Salvation Army, a man should have a voice with bristles down its back; a voice that would scare old Satan into St. Vitus' dance. While I do not endorse Satan or any of his acts, I believe that we should give him a chance. Satan has done a good many things that were essentially wrong, and there is a general feeling against him, and yet, badly as I hate him, and bitterly as I would fight him on a fair field, I would not ask him to wake up suddenly, out of a sound sleep, and find himself surrounded by a Salvation Army. To call an enemy out of doors and kill him according to Cushing's manual is one thing, and to score him into hydrophobia is quite another.—Bill Nye.
